Was Recently Dedicated at Sullivan, History of the Movement.

A short time since there was a grand meeting of the Masonic fraternity at Sullivan, Ill., where the occasion was the dedication of the corner stone of a building for the Masonic Widows and Orphans' home, which is to be erected by the grand lodge of this state. The man who started the movement was Robert A. Miller, who left a large property, just out side of Sullivan for the purpose.

He died some years ago and left certain properties to his wife for her use during her natural life and at her death all was to be given the grand lodge of the state for the purpose mentioned. She passed away a short time since and the gift became available in 1901.

The following is from the Sullivan Progress, kindly loaned by David Johnson:

Robert Andrew Miller, whose bequest made it possible for the location of the Masonic home near Sullivan, was born in Christian county, Ky., Feb. 10, 1825. His father, John Miller, was among the early settlers of north central Illinois. He was elected state treasurer in 1856 and his son, Robert, was deputy in the office during his term.

Both of Robert A. Miller's parents were descendants of Scotch-Irish and English stock and were both born in Virginia. His maternal grandfather, John Moore, was a revolutionary soldier.

The Miller family having moved to Illinois in 1835, young Robert obtained a plain education and afterwards engaged in farming, stock-raising and for a time was associated with his father in mercantile pursuits. He later on made a trip to California in 1865 with a drove of mules. He rode a favorite saddle horse, for which he was offered $1,000 in gold which he refused. He returned to Illinois and resided on his father's place until 1866. He lived on this farm until a short time before his death when he moved to Sullivan. His death occurred in February, 1891.

Mr. Miller was married in 1872, his wife being a daughter of Capt. Thomas Swain, of Philadelphia. His wife survived him ten years. In the conclusion of a biographical sketch prepared by W. B. Carlock, of Bloomington, it is truthfully said that "in his whole career, no trace of suspicion was ever uttered against his integrity or darkened the brightness of his honor and when we measure him as a citizen, we see the character of his splendid mind and the lustre of his honest, noble manhood. His home was his greatest place of happiness. He warmly appreciated the unchanging love and devotion of his wife and Christian wife. As a husband, he was loving, faithful and tender."

At the last meeting of the grand lodge an appropriation of $25,000 was made to begin the erection of the building and the following committee on buildings and grounds was appointed: C. F. Hitchcock, Peoria; J. B. McFarland, Chicago; Judge W. G. Cochran, of this city. This committee went promptly to work and as soon as possible plans and specifications for one building were adopted. This building will be 140 feet long and 40 feet wide, and has a good basement. It is two stories high and is well arranged for the purposes of the home. The basement walls are of stone and the other stories are of brick with stone trimmings. The building is to be practically fireproof and entirely up-to-date in all its arrangements.

The contract for the entire building was let to Walter Benson, of Peoria, and the cost will be about $37,000. Another appropriation will be made in November of this year to complete the building. Work was begun as soon as the opening of the season would permit. The basement walls are not yet completed, but the portion of the front was pushed on to get ready for the ceremonies of laying the corner stone.

The building will be enclosed this fall before cold weather so that work can progress right along until it is all finished.

The day of the corner stone laying was most notable and the town was visited by thousands who were ready to participate in the ceremonies. The procession was one and one-half miles long and was followed by members of the grand lodge in carriages led by the Decatur commandery, led by Goodman's band. There were seven bands in the procession. There were about 1,000 bugles and carriages that went out in front of the procession. Behind it, the carriages went four abreast and as close as they could drive with safety. The entire length of the two mile road from the city to the home was covered by the procession. It was a sight the like of which was never witnessed here before and will not be equalled again until the home is ready for dedication.

The line of march was from West Harrison street to Main, south on Main to Jefferson, east on Jefferson to Washington, north on Washington to Harrison, east on Harrison to Calhoun, north on Calhoun to Monroe to Lebanon, north on Lebanon to Jackson, and east on Jackson to the home.

The program at the grounds was interesting and impressive. There was music by the consolidated bands and a song, "Remember Now, The Creator," by a choir. A biographical sketch of Robert A. Miller was read. A song by Miss Winnie Titus was a rare treat. An appropriate address was delivered by Grand Master George M. McLaughlin and the divine blessing was invoked by Grand Chaplain W. G. Cochran. After a song, "Awake Psaltery and Harp," by the choir, a box of mementoes was placed under the corner stone. The band played "America" and the corner stone was lowered with grand honors. The "Gloria Patria" was sung by the choir and then came the ceremonies of "Proving the Corner Stone" and "Consecration of the Corner Stone."

After an invocation by the grand master and announcement by Grand Marshal George A. Stadler, the bands played and the assembly sang, "Best be the God that Brought us Here." They followed an oration by Grand Orator James B. McFarland, and the doxology and benediction.

A Study of the Balm will be carried on by the bureau of forestry this summer in the Adirondacks and in Maine. Work has already been done in the Adirondacks and the object of the coming season's work will be to conclude the study, the results of which will probably be published next spring. The main purpose of the investigation of balsam is to determine its suitability for use as paper pulp, the quantity which is now standing, and the results that can be expected in the production of a second crop under conservative methods of lumbering.

A study of the popular in Maine has come about through the increased use of paper as paper pulp material. Its general scope is similar to that of the balsam investigation. The work on southern hardwoods this year will be a continuation of the study which has already been carried on during two seasons. Its purpose is to determine the stand, the present yield and the possible uses, and the best methods of management for the following important commercial hardwoods of the south: Tulip tree, white oak, post oak, chestnut oak, basswood, chestnut, the hickories and white ash.
